Get Connected – Transitioning to Online Based Assignments

CEUs: 0.2 GS CEUs

Description:

This brief workshop will exam the remote communication/meeting platforms of Zoom, Microsoft TEAMS, WebEx and Google Meet and how interpreters can navigate each. Participants will have opportunity to log in and out of meetings and to experiment with the various features through guided instruction.

Participants should bring laptop, tablet, or phone to this workshop to practice skills in real time.

Presenter – Brian Stanford:

Brian Stanford is a 2019 graduate of the East Carolina University's Information Computer Technology and Networking program. While in school, Brian was a student worker assigned to Disability Support Services, however, once he graduated, he was hired full time as an Assistive Technology Specialist. While he serves other offices within the Division of Student Affairs, he is housed with Disability Support Services and is their primary Assistive Technology expert working to accommodate students with disabilities.

Brian worked tirelessly through the COVID-19 pandemic to assist staff and students with online communication and remote instruction. He has extensive knowledge of the various platforms being used for these purposes and the features they have for accommodating individuals with disabilities.
